

ABSTRACT

A programmable resistance memory element using a conductive sidewall layer as the bottom electrode. The programmable resistance memory material deposited over the top edge of the bottom electrode, in a slot-like opening of a dielectric material. A method of making the opening.